2. Relay Rule FAQ's

How big is the changeover zone?

For the 4x100m and 4x200m relays, the changeover zone is 30 metres long. For the medley relay, the first two changeovers are 30m long, and the final change is 20m long.

The baton must be transferred within this zone. A baton change prior to the zone starting will result in a disqualification, as would a change occurring after the zone.

Athletes can be within or outside the changeover zone to transfer the baton, however as long as the baton is transferred within the zone, the changeover will be all clear.

Who picks up the baton if it is dropped?

If the baton is dropped, the athlete who dropped the baton is to pick the baton up. Typically, this will be the incoming runner. If this does not occur and an advantage is gained, then the team will be disqualified.
